1. Introduction

From the Database Location option in the Parameters section, you will be able to install the GenMix on a network location.

2. Pre-requisites

To implement the Network Installation, one must first understand the Client-Server architecture:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Client%E2%80%93server_model

3. Steps to consider the following before applying the process:

1. This process should be preferably performed by an IT personal
2. The location of the main GenMix installation is called Server, the other installations, are called client.
3. The server should be configured correctly by enabling the proper security permissions for the GenMix to access the database properly.

| Windows 8, 8.1 | http://windows.microsoft.com/en-us/windows/sharing-files-printers-help |

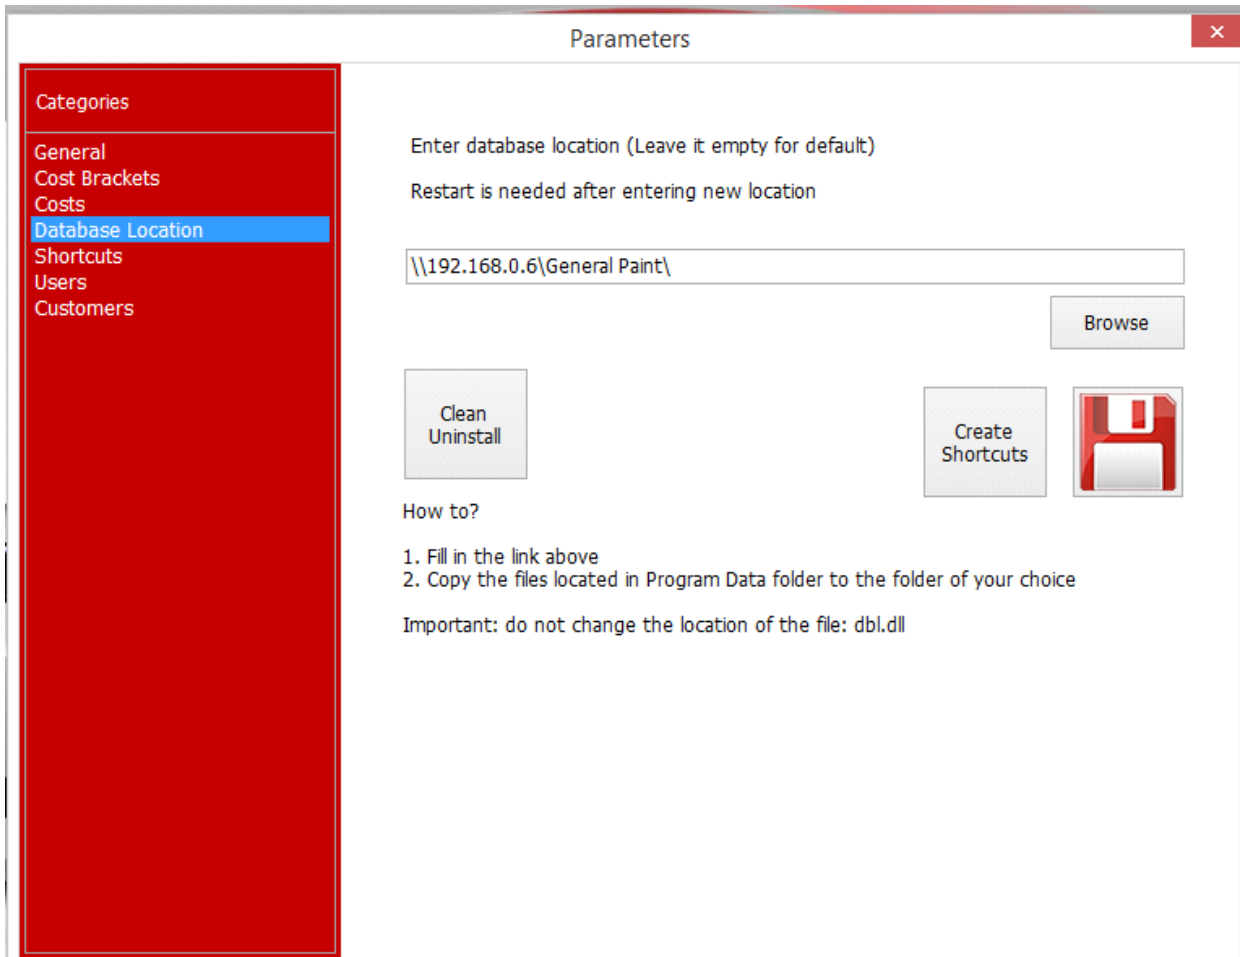

4. The server should be configured with a static IP address
5. The \\192.168.0.6\General Paint in the screenshot should be replaced by the correct location of the shared ProgramData database folder

- Please note that this process has not been tested in depth and has only been tested on a Windows Server - Windows (XP, 7 & 8.1) installations.

4. General Explanation

The procedure can be done by setting the database location in the parameters to the correct location of the C:\ProgramData folder where the main GenMix has been installed as in the example below:
